CoRoT (French: Convection, Rotation et Transits planétaires; English: Convection, Rotation and planetary Transits) was a space telescope mission which operated from 2006 to 2013. The mission's two objectives were to search for extrasolar planets with short orbital periods, particularly those of large terrestrial size, and to perform asteroseismology by measuring solar-like oscillations in stars.

CoRoT - Wikipedia

Born in Paris on 17 July 1796, Corot was the son of a cloth merchant and a milliner. After an education at the Collège de Rouen and two abortive apprenticeships with drapers, he was given the financial freedom at the age of 26 to devote himself to painting.

The CoRoT satellite, launched in December 2006, was the first mission designed for the search of exoplanets from space. Well adapted to explore the close-in planet population, it has opened the domain of the super-Earth planets, a population that had not been predicted by planet formation models but was later demonstrated by Kepler to be numerous.

As was his custom, Corot painted the sky last, bringing it down over the roofs of the houses, in one case obscuring the roof entirely. He also added tree trunks at a late stage, such as the silver birch hovering to the right of the principal tree. A river runs from the left edge of this painting to the bottom right corner.
