Mel Ramos, Peek, a, boo, Platinum #2 — Art Derivatives

Mel Ramos is an American Pop artist best known for his female nudes painted alongside brand logos. The artist's coupling of women with familiar products like martini glasses and bananas serves as a commentary on the ways in which capitalism has employed the female body.

~~Mel Ramos | artnet~~

Melvin John Ramos was an American figurative painter, specializing most often in paintings of female nudes, whose work incorporates elements of realist and abstract art. Born in Sacramento, California, to a first generation Portuguese-Azorean immigrant family, he gained his popularity as part of the pop art movement of the 1960s. Ramos is "best known for his paintings of superheroes and voluptuous female nudes emerging from cornstalks or Chiquita bananas, popping up from candy wrappers or lounge

~~The Girls of Mel Ramos by Mel Ramos: new (1975) | GoldBooks~~

Rendered with chromatic energy and poster-like precision, The Princess, 1965, is a quintessential example of Mel Ramos's technically commanding and thematically driven oeuvre which has, over the course of his almost six-decades career, continuously shed light on glamourised female characters. At the heart of the present composition, a young woman is seen perched on an over-sized telephone, set against an unblemished background of luminous yellow.
