Manilius, however, seems to have imagined it flowing right through Cetus and on to the mouth of the Southern Fish, before reaching which it had necessarily to be joined by the waters from Aquarius's stream (sometimes reckoned as a separate constellation). The two streams constitute the poet's Flumina.

MANILIUS, Astronomica | Loeb Classical Library

His Astronomica, a Latin didactic poem in five books, begins with an account of celestial phenomena, and then proceeds to treat of the signs of the zodiac and the twelve temples; there follow instructions for calculating the horoscoping degree, and details of chronocrators, decans, injurious degrees, zodiacal geography, paranatellonta, and other technical matters. Besides exhibiting great virtuosity in rendering mathematical tables and diagrams in verse form, the poet writes with some ...
