John Gilstrap writes a good taut, fast-paced story in No Mercy that I would like to read. Unfortunately, reader Jeremy Gage ruins it as an audio book. I don't know anything about him, but he sounds like he is quite elderly and reading for small children. He reads in a "sing-songy" voice that never varies pitch, timbre or pace.

John Gilstrap's debut in the Jonathan Grave series, No Mercy, is very much a "grocery store book". In fact, I first learned of this series after seeing a later book by him in-a grocery store. That being said, not all grocery store books are bad. This is, in fact, one of the best thrillers I've read in a while.
