Qualitative research simply requires a broader and less restrictive concept of “design” than the traditional ones described above. Thus, Becker, Geer, Hughes, and Strauss (1961), authors of a classic qualitative study of medical students, begin their chapter titled “Design of the Study” by stating, In one sense, our study had no design. That is, we had no well-worked-out set of hypotheses to be tested, no data-gathering instruments purposely designed to secure information relevant to these hypotheses, no set of analytic ...
