Stone Heart: A Novel of Sacajawea

A moving, sometimes hilarious account of a family trying to hold itself together, A Stone of the Heart chronicles the dysfunction of a Queens, New York, Irish-Catholic family. Set in 1961, the book is narrated by the family's oldest son, fourteen-year-old Michael—overweight and obsessed with baseball statistics—who is trying to come to grips with his parents' disastrous ma.

This is the first book in the Irish Angel series. Jill Marie has done an outstanding job with this first installment, and I now look forward to reading the second book, Heart of Lies. This book takes right up right where Heart of Stone left off - a detective Laura hired to search for her siblings might just have found one of her sisters. Wow, what a way to end it. I highly recommend this entertaining and lovely book! I reviewed this book for Zondervan.
