Deciding Not to Read is to be Ignorant of Literary History. Writer and philosopher, George Santayana wrote, “Those who cannot remember the past are condemned to repeat it.”. While the context of which he was writing was different, the sentiment remains true. We must learn from our mistakes and those of others.

I'm not sure I quite understood the task I was undertaking at the time, and I'll be completely honest with you: There were times I got woefully behind regarding the reading schedule. There were days when I didn't feel like reading. There were days I didn't have time to read. And there were days I couldn't get my book away from Fred. This is Fred.

To Read, or Not To Read

Devote twenty or thirty minutes a day to read anything other than a textbook. Finding your personal favorite time to read is also incredibly helpful. If you're a morning person, try to fit reading early in the day, or read right before bed if you're most relaxed during the nighttime. Most importantly, find something interesting.

To read or not to read? That is the question, one that comes up during those middle school years when grades begin to take precedence over reading. I like to call this "the literary moment of truth." Most succumb to the illusion that reading, even for leisure, has become chore, a hunt for symbols and motifs.

To Read or Not To Read | HuffPost

This book gets 4 stars because of it's content and I highly recommend it. It's a rather short read at 143 pages long. (Contrary to what Goodreads.com says of it being 160 pages.) However, I found it a challenging book to read. Although it is only 6 chapters long, they were to me packed way too full and were not as succinct as they could have been.

The only drawback of learning to read music is that it takes time. Second, if you do decide to learn to read music, regardless of your reasons, don't get stuck on the page! Remember that music notation is only a means to an end and not the end itself.

To Read Or Not To Read | Lessonface

It is not enough to tell your child to read. Children need to see adults reading (the newspaper, instructions, recipes, books, magazines, etc.) in order to understand how important it is. They DO need to know that reading can get them the information they need, but they also need to know it can take them to far-off places, on exciting adventures, and to lands full of imagination and wonder.
