Toni Anna Wolff was a Swiss Jungian analyst and a close collaborator of Carl Jung. During her analytic career Wolff published relatively little under her own name, but she helped Jung identify, define, and name some of his best-known concepts, including anima, animus, and persona, as well as the theory of the psychological types. Her best-known paper is an essay on four "types" or aspects of the feminine psyche: the Amazon, the Mother, the Hetaira, and the Medial Woman.

Toni Wolff - Wikipedia

Captivating, astute, and at times endearing, Toni Wolff & C. G. Jung tells the story of the most enigmatic woman in the creative life of C. G. Jung—Toni Wolff. Wolff was Jung's primary collaborator during the formative years of his psychological investigations.

Toni Wolff & C. G. Jung: A Collaboration by Nan Savage Healy

Analysis with C.G. Jung. Toni Wolff met Dr. med. Jung for the first time on September 20, 1910. We know the exact date because she wrote in her diary, years later on September 20, 1925, that she recalls consulting Jung for the first time fifteen years earlier to the day. They would have sat in his library, where he saw his patients, a room Jane Wheelwright recalls as cluttered with “stacked unread letters, notes in his handwriting, all kinds of papers, and books opened to special places.”.

Toni Wolff & C.G. Jung - A Collaboration - Astrodienst

It appears to me that it is not just Sonu Shamdasai who had difficulty acknowledging the pivotal role Toni Wolff played in Jung's life, but a problem throughout much of Jungian history. There was initially a chapter about her in Memories, Dreams and Reflections; it was deleted, and as far as I know has not surfaced any where else. (The 50th anniversary of Jung's death is coming up next summer, and more of his papers will be released — perhaps this will be part of it.).
